MAINE SCHOOLS DOING WELL IN DEFENSE STAMP DRIVE

Maine schools, from Allagash to Allagash, are joining in the U S Defense stamp and Savings Bond campaign in such numbers that this state soon may become the national leader in this activity, Harvey M Fickett, State Savings Bond director, states.

During the past three weeks, more than 80 Maine schools have either newly joined or reactivated their Defense Stamp school savings program, which first was instituted as a Treasury Department activity in 1941.

A display at the October Maine State Teachers Convention, installed by John C Cass of the State Department of Education, as well as an informative letter from the Maine Savings Bond Division to all schools, brought on the flood of requests for free School Savings Campaign material.

So great has been the national response to the School Savings program, that the Treasury Department decided to conduct a national school campaign from November 19 to January 31.

Primarily an educational program encouraging thrift, conservation and good citizenship, the financial participation on the Defense-Savings program is impressive. Harvey Piper, principal of the Stillwater School at Stillwater, with 145 pupils, has informed Mr Fickett that Defense stamp sales so far this year have amounted to $268.55. Last year this school's total was $1,150.

In the Laura V Dame School at Eliot, Principal Clinton W Phinney's 140 pupils have bought more than $300 of Defense Stamps since September 15. Even the Rapid School at Allagash, with 15 pupils, is taking part in the effort. Noteworthy current development, according to Fickett, is the increasing number of high school and junior high schools taking on the campaign.

The cumulative financial effect of the Defense Stamp school savings program is shown in the record of the Cunningham School at Presque Isle. Principal M C G Sawyer's 22 classrooms, averaging 35 pupils each from sub-primary to eighth grade, bought $30,000 (fifty thousands) of stamps and bonds during World War II and presently is engaged in the new Defense stamp effort. The national editor of the Treasury Department's School Savings Journal was in Presque Isle last week to get a story and color pictures on this unusual record. The South Paris school will also be featured for its excellent record.

To make the savings program part of the educational process, the children are encouraged to conduct their individual school programs themselves, under teachers' guidance. The classroom amassing the largest weekly total is entitled to display an attractive Honor Award poster, while with the purchase of each $25 bond, the owner wins the popular Treasury Department "Shmoos Certificate," prized by the youngsters.

A special slide film for school use, "Billy Dollar," heads the list of standard promotional material on the Defense Stamp-school savings program available free from the Maine Savings Bond Headquarters at 76 Pearl Street, Portland.

Mr and Mrs Elmer Bennett, son Wayne and daughter Joan will be holiday guests of Mr and Mrs Andrew Eastman Norway.

A family gathering at the home of Mr and Mrs Tony Gibbs will include Mr and Mrs Richard Woodcock of Providence, R I.

Mr and Mrs Raymond Holt and daughters Dorothy and Barbara, of Wilton, and the Messrs Katherine, Helene and Marilyn Boyker, of Bethel, Mass, Francis Boyker, of Bethel, and children, Philip, and Stephanie will be guests of Mr and Mrs Henry Boyker.

SLOWLY RISING PRICES FORECAST FOR COMING YEAR

Slowing rising prices as a result of rising costs are expected during the coming year, says Allen W. Manchester, Extension Service economist of the University of Maine.

That seemed to be the consensus of opinion at the recent Outlook Conference in Washington, D. C., he reports. It is quite likely that price shortages may begin to appear, particularly in goods made of metal, and it's fairly likely that consumer demand will begin to pick up. Under the present law, price ceilings must be raised when costs rise and there is apt to be an inflationary spiral, points out Manchester.

A Healthy Indignation

The results of the municipal elections in New York and Philadelphia strengthen the feeling I've had all along that the rank and file of American citizens, whatever their creed or race or political party, have not lost respect for the high moral principles of honesty and honor exemplified by the Fighting Fathers. In both cities the people ignored party labels and voted for what they believed to be the best man for the job. Entrenched corruption was defeated. It should be a stunning warning to those politicians at all levels who have been participating in or condoning graft and corruption.

Some notion has been deeply imparted by the very fact that the dishonest and disreputable acts of public officials have been permitted to go unchallenged by important leaders. The injury done to our younger generation will never be healed. If it is in elections from now on a majority of Americans will elect those who are honest and who are not afraid to stand up for the principles of honesty and integrity.

For the freedom of our land, and the challenge which that freedom brings, we thank Thee our Heavenly Father. Unknown.

For the ability to be of service to a fellow creature, we ought to give thanks, and demand it since in any other act of helpfulness it is the helper who is most helped.

Powerful Speech

After months ago Herbert Hoover made a speech at the Madison Square Garden in New York City. It was a powerful and powerful speech. Hoover said that the integrity of the government is the integrity of the nation. He said that the integrity of the government is the integrity of the nation. He said that the integrity of the government is the integrity of the nation.

Washington

WASHINGTON was relatively quiet despite the visit of General Eisenhower, because the President departed for his annual winter vacation at Key West and most of the members of the Congress were either back in their homes or en route to their homes. The only activity in the city was the arrival of the President's train at the Union Station. The President's train arrived at 10:30 a.m. and the President was met by the Vice President, the Speaker of the House, and the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

During the visit of General Eisenhower, every utterance of the general on his political inclinations in which he denied any participation in politics or that he had authorized any person to make any move in his behalf toward securing him for the presidency was related to the views of the general.

President Truman's dramatic foreign relations speech was generally viewed here as extending both the views of General Eisenhower and his own earlier at the European policy conference. The speech of the President was generally viewed here as extending both the views of General Eisenhower and his own earlier at the European policy conference.

Our Greatest Danger

Something more than a case of the cold is needed by Americans to make them realize that the greatest danger to the United States is not the Soviet Union, but the lack of leadership. The greatest danger to the United States is not the Soviet Union, but the lack of leadership.

"HOW TO WIN FRIENDS and INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

Serenity, Courage, Wisdom

ONE DAY as Louis D. Donaldson, Bloomington, Ohio, was driving to his home over icy roads, he made the most disastrous move of his career. The car skidded and he suddenly jammed on his brakes!

The next thing he knew, the next morning, he was in the hospital. When the doctor came in a few hours later he asked if he could have his clothes and go home. Said the doctor, "Yes, you can—in about six weeks. You have a fractured skull and your must stay right where you are, flat on your back—and be quiet."

Flat on his back for six weeks! He certainly would not. He couldn't do it; his business would be gone; he would be ruined. He explained the situation to the doctor, who was adamant. He pleaded, threatened, raved. All to no avail. He complained to his wife. She decided against him. "Lou," she said, "you must do what the doctor says."

"To heck with the doctor, I am going home."

But when he made an effort to move, he didn't feel like carrying out his resolve. He looked in the mirror, saw blackened eyes, almost closed; his nose was swollen to the size of a football; his head was covered with gauze and mercurochrome. What a mess! And it all had happened in one unguarded moment!

That evening his wife brought him something to read. He didn't feel like reading long, but one thing he read stuck; just a few lines transformed his thinking and aided his recovery: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change; the courage to change the things I can; and the wisdom to know the difference."

Wonderful lines! Lines that not only calmed his mind for the time being, but lines that have helped him in all the time that has passed since that memorable day.

THE AMERICAN WAY

It Isn't Funny!

by Dr. Alfred P. Haake

EDITOR'S NOTE: Alfred P. Haake, Ph.D., Mayor of Park Ridge, Illinois, is a noted Economist, Business Consultant, Lecturer and Author.

Comrade Lenin of Russia once remarked that he would destroy the United States by inducing us to spend ourselves to death. There were people who laughed at his prediction, but in the light of what has actually happened since then, it is not funny. We ARE spending ourselves to death.

We have given away almost 12 billion dollars worth of goods. That means 12 billion million dollars, or the equivalent of two dollars for every second of time since Christ was born. Or, in more modern terms, it means ten thousand dollars for every family in the United States living west of the Mississippi River.

Our public debt is double that

FOR THIS WE GIVE THANKS

TO BE LIVING IN THE GREATEST NATION IN HISTORY AND TO BE LEADING THE FIGHT AGAINST THE TERRIBLE THREAT TO HUMAN LIBERTY!

of all Europe. Think of it! The 150 million people of the United States have a government debt twice as large as that of all the governments of the 500 million people of Europe.

Tragically intertwined with our debt is the need for a huge national income, about 200 billion dollars a year. But the income is predicted largely on government spending. Let the government in Washington relax its extravagance and immediately unemployment begins to appear. It is an unhealthy, unsound prosperity, one hailed with the ironic song, "Happy Days Are Here Again."

Now we are spending for politicians, for free, for favors through the RFC, and other gentle indications of executive leniency, is the planting of hundreds of thousands of federal employees in a number of states. These thousands, with their families, helped elect Harry Truman in 1948, and they have more votes today than they had then. So the taxpayers' money is being spent to make sure that they continue to finance the creeping socialism that must eventually destroy our freedom.

The administration has been pulverizing Russia with threats and admonitions, while beginning to do the very things that it fired MacArthur for wanting to do in the Far East. But the American people need not be afraid of Russian military might, not yet. What they need to fear is the whittling away of our own strength, the undermining of our own security by influence in authority of people friendly to Russian ideas who carry out the program of spending that Lenin once said he would induce to destroy us.

And "good old Joe" undoubtedly laughs up his sleeve, or snickers in his vodka, as he sees the United States throwing its strength down the gutter of government spending. What a delicious morsel it must be for Stalin to see us futilely fighting inflation by sitting on the lid of prices while we turn up the fire of inflationary causes underneath, trying to control prices by edict, while government spending continues to pour more diluted dollars into the watery stream of purchasing power which has already stolen away more than half of our savings during the past ten years.

There are still congenitally shortsighted people who laugh at the idea of the United States ever going down the drain, while the President boasts that the people will surely return him or his crowd to power. And Stalin laughs and laughs at the spectacle of the United States spending itself into the clutches of Russian ideology.

But you and I, the taxpayers, the millions of workers who were encouraged to believe that only the corporation and rich would pay the higher taxes, now know it is we who have to pay. And worse, our children and children's children will be forced to labor for more than a hundred years to pay for the tunneling of our pipe now pipes. Well, it isn't funny. Perhaps it's time we change the record.

LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

Today I venture—and almost alone, she looks like—and invite a hurricane of abuses and criticism from the holly-tolly in the education business. You go to work and say something derogatory about education, says Henry—and you will wake up a dead duck. Well, I say, I am not against education—I am for same—what I am about to say has to do with how we are going about it—maybe taking in too much territory, or what. Like leading a horse to water—you don't educate many against their will—you are donating your time and money.

With the ill-manners that now prevail throughout the land—with our inability to recognize ability and elect stable individuals to high office, it behooves us to ask how come. We are turning out no better—if as good—citizens via our ultra modern expensive methods. The management of U. S. A. affairs today does not come within gunshot of the type of management displayed by the pioneers of the original 13 states.

Free education sounds wonderful but many things that are completely free are not so highly appreciated. Swimming pools, auditoriums with grand pianos, free lunches, free rides to school—these free things don't breed ruggedness and self-reliance. I am trying to find out why this U. S. A. bears so little resemblance to our U. S. A. of 50 years ago—find out why this idea has crept in that Govt. should be the great I AM from the nursery to the mortician—trying to find out if the teaching at the school house has anything to do with our growing softness.

Yours with the low-down,
JO KERRIA

CIVIL DEFENSE

PUBLIC SAFETY

Are civil defense forces used only during wartime emergencies?

Civil defense units in Maine would become active in peacetime emergencies as well as wartime disasters.

Forest fires, floods, hurricanes and industrial explosions could overtax existing facilities to combat them.

Volunteer CD police, firemen and first-aid workers would play an important part in helping to minimize damage and in giving aid to victims.

The State's Mutual Aid Mobile Reserve Battalions, composed of skilled technicians trained to offer a variety of public safety services, can be rushed to any part of Maine where emergency assistance is required. Two such battalions have been organized and trained; one more is in the organizational stage.

How can I help in the civil defense program?

Whether you have special skills or not, register now with your local civil defense office. There is a real job for everyone.

What will be expected of me in time of disaster?

You will be expected to follow instructions and keep calm.

Where will I get instructions in time of disaster?

Rely only on official information. It will come through the press, the radio, and from your local organization.

Science Quiz

Q: What are "rare earths"?
A: Chemical elements of numbers 87 to 91 in the list of elements. They are not very rare, but because of chemical similarity it is difficult to separate them. As a result, their production and study is rather limited.

Q: How does a sextant work?

A: A sextant has a pair of mirrors, one fixed and the other movable. As the user looks through a small telescope, he adjusts the movable mirror until the image of a heavenly body is apparently brought into contact with the horizon. Then he can read from a graduated scale, the height of the object above the horizon in degrees of arc. With the aid of special tables and the exact time, he determines latitude and longitude, after finding the heights of certain heavenly bodies.

Q: How do eyeglasses correct defects of the eye?

A: When light of the eye is far-sighted, which means that it cannot be curved enough to focus nearby objects clearly, a convex (magnifying) lens gives the effect of additional curvature. Near-sightedness requires a concave (reducing) lens, for the curvature of the lens of the eye is then too much. In astigmatism the eye lens cannot focus vertical and horizontal lines sharply at the same time. This is corrected by a "cylindrical" lens, which is curved more along one diameter than along another.

Q: Is it true that the prehistoric dinosaurs had very small brains?

A: Yes. The bigger an animal the smaller usually is the weight of the brain expressed in ratio with the total weight. In a 75-pound sheep the 35-ounce brain is about a third of a per cent of the total, but the ten-pound brain of a six-ton elephant is only a tenth of a per cent. The dinosaurs did not even do as well as this. The one called Sarcosaurus weighed as much as an elephant, yet had a brain as big as that of a small kitten. Its brain was only a slight swelling at one end of its spinal cord.

Q: In the brother raising business in Maine, volume is essential for proper volume. Housing, equipment, and management methods must permit one man to care for a large volume of birds.

A: Maine Extension Country Specialist.

THE SAME LIKES

IT WAS a grand idea, Mr. Emmott, who had charge of the Philadelphia office for the circulation department of Sperry's Weekly, thought it up all by himself.

"We'll advertise for girls, and we'll state in the ad that they won't have to do any soliciting. That'll dispel any doubts, too. Then when the girls get here we'll send 'em out with you regular salesmen, too. All they have to do is introduce you to their friends, and then you regulars put across the sale, see?"

Jeff Elliot didn't see. He thought it was a rotten idea. But he didn't say so. He couldn't afford to lose his job. Selling magazine subscriptions had been paying him an average of $10 a week for the past six months.

Two days later when he reported at the office there was a girl there. A red-headed girl with a straight little nose and wide blue eyes. Mr. Emmott introduced her as Miss Patsy Jordan.

"Jeff's one of our best men," he told Patsy. "All you have to do is introduce him to your friends and he'll do the selling, see? Then you split the commissions, see?"

"I see," said the girl.

They took a trolley out to Evanson. They got off and walked up Maple Avenue and turned up Maris. "I've loads of friends living here," Patsy said. "Do you feel lucky?"

"I never felt more lucky in my life," Jeff said, looking at her. They called on a motherly sort of woman named Pierce. Mrs. Pierce seemed delighted to see Patsy.

She invited them in and before they left Jeff had sold two subscriptions. At the next apartment he sold one. Before noon he had sold five more. He showed at Patsy's apartment across a table in a tiny restaurant.

"Gee, what's your formula for being popular? Those sales were fabulous. Maybe Emmott wasn't so reckless with his idea after all."

Patsy regarded him over a glass of milk. She was, Jeff thought, about the prettiest girl ever.

"Are you always going to be a magazine salesman?" she asked him. "I can't tell," he told her emphatically. "I'm studying now for my law degree. Right now I'm only a bar and save up a thousand dollars. I'm going to come little by little into the hills."

"I like little towns in the hills," Patsy said.

That afternoon they called on a score of Patsy's friends and Jeff made 100 per cent sales. He was delighted. He was delighted with Patsy. Tomorrow he was going to ask her to have dinner with him before his law class began.

The next morning they visited another district. Patsy introduced him to a woman in a dilapidated apartment house. He sold her a subscription. Then they knocked on another door. There was a long wait. Finally the door opened a crack and a man's face peered out at them.

"Is Flora in?" Patsy asked.

"Who wants her?"

"I do, I'm Patsy Jordan."

The man stared at her. "What d'you want her for?" he asked.

Patsy glanced at Jeff appealingly. Jeff didn't like the man's looks or tone. He said:

"She wants to introduce her to me. I'm a magazine salesman. Patsy—Miss Jordan is working with me. If you'll please tell—"

"Don't want none," the man said. The door closed.

That night Jeff took Patsy to dinner. She wore a satin gown that gave her skin a milky-white look. He almost lost his head and asked her to marry him then and there. The next morning when he came to the office Patsy wasn't there. He waited an hour and she didn't come.

At noon he went out and ate a sandwich. He felt glum, low-spirited. He went back to the office, but Patsy hadn't reported. At 2 o'clock Mr. Emmott told him he was wasting time hanging around.

Jeff didn't sell a single subscription that afternoon. The next day he got to the office early, but Patsy didn't show up. He cut his law class that night and went to her address. It was an apartment house. The janitor told him that the apartment where Patsy said she lived hadn't been occupied for three months.

He went back to his own room. He didn't know what to make of it. He was a little angry.

At 9 o'clock there was a knock on his door. It was Patsy. She came in and handed him an envelope. He opened the envelope and gaped at its contents. It was a check made out to him for $1000.

Patsy enjoyed his bewilderment. She said, before explaining: "Now, all you have to do is pass your bar exams." Then: "It's your share of the reward."

"What reward?"

"For the capture of Flora Darrell. The police suspected where she was hiding. They didn't dare investigate for fear of scaring her off. They needed an outsider. They saw the advertisement for girls. My brother is a police inspector. He asked me to help out. We planted all those subscriptions, so you wouldn't get suspicious, so you'd act like a real salesman when finally we called at where she thought Flora lived. It worked. Last night they made the capture. Do, please don't say it. Of course it was a mean trick, but Flora was Public Enemy No. 1. Besides, you don't like selling magazines and we both like small towns in the hills—and doesn't that mean anything to you?"

Jeff swallowed. He cleared his throat. He scratched his head. He decided to say nothing that he thought he ought to say. Instead he merely said "Yes." And took her into his arms.

CARD OF THANKS
I wish to express my sincere thanks to my dear friends and relatives for the lovely cards and gifts which I received on my 90th birthday.

Mrs. Grace M. Swan

Thanksgiving
AT THIS time of the year the thoughts of many turn with gratitude to the brave little band of Pilgrims, numbering 102 all told, who sailed from Plymouth, England, on September 6, 1620, in search of religious freedom. Some two months later they came ashore in America on the coast of Massachusetts, where they established the Plymouth colony. History records that their first act after landing was to offer thanks to God.

A year later, though they had suffered material hardships and loss, they assembled for a season of thanksgiving to God for the provision and protection He had given them in a strange new land. They put spiritual values first. Their gratitude for the continuous care of a loving Father, often expressed in the face of hardship, was undoubtedly the inspiration of the holiday later instituted by proclamation as a national Thanksgiving Day.

The Bible abounds with stories of those who understood that the offering of thanks to God constitutes a high order of prayer. One writer tells us (Psalm 103:1, 2): "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord. . . to show forth thy lovingkindness in the morning, and thy faithfulness every night." Christ Jesus carried out this prayer of thanksgiving to the full. He lived the gratitude he expressed.

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, and a consecrated, consistent follower of Christ Jesus, has written much on the subject of gratitude. In the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," she writes (p. 31): "Gratitude is much more than a verbal expression of thanks. Action expresses more gratitude than speech."

The giving of thanks would indicate the acceptance of a gift. Mortals petitioning God for the granting of material desires are blind to the truth that a loving Father is continually supplying all good to His children. . .

One who makes a practice of offering thanks to God lifts his thought above the mists of error to perceive something of the truth of God's love and providence. Paul wrote (Philippians 4:6): "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." The word "careful" used here means full of care. Jesus used the same word when he said to Martha (Luke 10:41): "Thou art careful and troubled about many things."

. . . A clear sense of the ever-present, power, and joy of divine love pours into the consciousness of him who pours out his heart's gratitude to God in love and service. He will know the healing power of thanksgiving. —THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR.

REV. ROBERT H. HARPER
Joseph's Part in God's Plan.
Lesson: Genesis 47:1-7; 50:18-24.
Memory Selection: Romans 8:28.

THE READER is doubtless familiar with the events that brought Joseph into Egypt and in time made him second only to Pharaoh. The first part of our lesson text tells of the presenting of some of Joseph's brothers unto Pharaoh, followed by their settlement in the land of Goshen, lying along the delta of the Nile. There they tended their flocks and also those of Pharaoh.

Soon after coming into Egypt Jacob came to the end of his long pilgrimage of life. And, after the patriarch was embalmed and a period of mourning had been observed, Joseph and his brethren bore the body of Jacob to the land of Canaan and laid it beside Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, and Leah in the cave of Machpelah, which Abraham had bought for a buryingplace from Ephron the Hittite.

After the return to Egypt, Joseph's brethren, fearing that their father being dead, Joseph would take vengeance upon them for having sold him into slavery, came as supplicants to him, imploring his forgiveness. Then it was that Joseph showed his gracious heart, he wept before his brethren freely and forgave them for the wrong they had done him. He told them they had meant evil unto him, but God had used it for their good and "to save much people alive." Thus and Joseph gave a great part in God's plan to preserve the people that had chosen.

Report Good Crops in State

The crop harvest in Maine was completed under unusually favorable weather conditions and yields were generally very good, according to a joint report released by the Maine and the United States Departments of Agriculture. Apple production in the commercial counties of Maine is now estimated at 1,154,000 bushels—17 per cent less than the 1,391,000 bushel crop harvested last year but 46 per cent above the 10-year average production of 788,000 bushels. A fairly large McIntosh crop has been harvested although somewhat smaller than in 1950. The production of Baldwin and Delicious is similar to last year, Cortland smaller and Northern Spy larger, with the production of all important varieties above average.

Apple production in the commercial counties of New England totals 3,549,000 bushels, about five per cent smaller than the 1950 crop of 3,955,000 bushels, but 38 per cent greater than the 10-year average production of 2,578,000 bushels. The season was very favorable for apple production. The quality of the apple crop is about average in northern New England and average to excellent in southern New England. Damage from scab was quite heavy in some areas this year. Growers who did not do a good job of spraying lost their crop to insects and scab or else the crop is of poor quality. The keeping quality of this year's crop will not be as good as the 1950 crop because some fruit particularly the McIntosh variety was over-ripe when harvested. In New England the production of Greenings and Delicious is somewhat larger than last year, the production of Cortland and Gravenstein is about the same as last year, while the production of McIntosh and Northern Spy is slightly smaller. The production of Baldwin this year is greatly reduced from that in 1950.

The potato crop in Maine is now estimated at 45,729,000 bushels, 27 per cent smaller than the 62,700,000 bushel crop harvested last year but 24 per cent smaller than the 10-year average production of 59,000,000 bushels. Although substantially below the record set last year, late blight and late blight rot reduced potato yields in Aroostook, affecting all but the Kennebec variety to a moderate extent. The acreage planted to potatoes this year is the smallest in more than forty-five years. Weather conditions were not favorable for production this year, especially in Aroostook county, where rainfall was relatively heavy all season. Harvest of the potato crop was completed in October under generally satisfactory conditions. No significant loss from freezing occurred. Potato production for New England is estimated at 52,992,000 bushels, 27 per cent less than the 72,341,000 bushels harvested last year and 26 per cent below the 10-year average production of 70,163,000 bushels. Late blight occurred extensively in many areas and some loss from rot is occurring. In most sections tubers of rather large size developed from a good set.

The production of corn in Maine estimated as the grain equivalent of 40,000 bushels is 5 per cent more than produced last year and approximately equal to the 10-year average production of 41,000 bushels. An excellent crop of oats was harvested this year but the buckwheat crop is somewhat short, being smaller than that of last year and the 10-year average. Hay yields this year are heavy due to the plentiful water supply. Hay production of 1,154,000 bushels—17 per cent less than the 1,391,000 bushel crop harvested last year but 46 per cent above the 10-year average production of 788,000 bushels. A fairly large McIntosh crop has been harvested although somewhat smaller than in 1950. The production of Baldwin and Delicious is similar to last year, Cortland smaller and Northern Spy larger, with the production of all important varieties above average.

Apple production in the commercial counties of New England totals 3,549,000 bushels, about five per cent smaller than the 1950 crop of 3,955,000 bushels, but 38 per cent greater than the 10-year average production of 2,578,000 bushels. The season was very favorable for apple production. The quality of the apple crop is about average in northern New England and average to excellent in southern New England. Damage from scab was quite heavy in some areas this year. Growers who did not do a good job of spraying lost their crop to insects and scab or else the crop is of poor quality. The keeping quality of this year's crop will not be as good as the 1950 crop because some fruit particularly the McIntosh variety was over-ripe when harvested. In New England the production of Greenings and Delicious is somewhat larger than last year, the production of Cortland and Gravenstein is about the same as last year, while the production of McIntosh and Northern Spy is slightly smaller. The production of Baldwin this year is greatly reduced from that in 1950.

The potato crop in Maine is now estimated at 45,729,000 bushels, 27 per cent smaller than the 62,700,000 bushel crop harvested last year but 24 per cent smaller than the 10-year average production of 59,000,000 bushels. Although substantially below the record set last year, late blight and late blight rot reduced potato yields in Aroostook, affecting all but the Kennebec variety to a moderate extent. ## U.S. Needs Civil Defense

A-Bomb Would Kill All Persons Unprotected in One-Half Mile

(This is the third of a series of articles on civil defense, based on the booklet "This Is Civil Defense" prepared by the Federal Civil Defense Administration. It may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., for ten cents.)

By MILLARD CALDWELL
Federal Civil Defense Administrator

Don't be surprised if you hear a siren blowing and learn that your community is being alerted for an imaginary atom bomb raid. If it is organized, within minutes, air raid wardens, first-aid teams, doctors, nurses, emergency rescue squads, and other civil defense units will spring into action.

Hundreds of cities, towns, and small communities in the United States today are making sure that they will be ready to do their part if, and when, the real atom bomb hits them or cities near them. These imaginary raids have shown that well-trained and coordinated civil defense personnel and equipment can do against enemy attack. However, don't act as if the alert signal you hear is just an imaginary air raid. Act as you have been trained to act. Do whatever you have been told to do. Civil defense prepares you for that split-second decision of knowing how to act—what to do.

Within one-half mile of the center of an A-bomb explosion almost everyone without proper protection will be killed. Within the next half-mile fifty per cent of the population will not survive. From one to one-and-a-half miles away eighty-five per cent will live. Beyond two miles from the center of the explosion you will survive—but there will be work for you to do. Civil defense prepares you for that too.

With the proper protection YOU may live, but thousands will be killed instantly and many others will be wounded and in need of immediate care. Every street within the major damage area will be completely blocked with rubble, and hundreds of persons trapped or buried in the wreckage. Fires will start within a matter of minutes—in many places at once.

Food Supply Destroyed
These are the main things which will happen, but there are others. For instance, a large part of this city's food supply might be destroyed.

Without civil defense a nation is helpless. With it, people and production centers can get up and fight back. Casualties can be cut at least in half. Our nation can live again and fight back to win!

Civil defense is self defense for you and for our country.
(This next article will discuss what are the biggest civil defense problems.)

Factories Would Be Useless
But there was something of even greater importance to a nation which was fighting for its life. The fact that there was no civil defense meant that the factories left standing after the atomic blast could not operate.

A PEEK at the STARS

By LYNN CONNELLY

HAL ROACH is reviving the old "Our Gang Comedies" for TV, but will run them as "Little Rascals" since MGM owns the other title. The script used by Eddie Cantor for his first west-to-east TV show will go into the Library of Congress. Joe E. Brown has signed for a TV kiddie series over CBS Sunday mornings. Roy Rogers' new film series is due to hit TV screens around mid-December. Japan should have television early next year, according to present plans. Sophie Tucker, who made her TV debut on Jimmy Durante's show last season, is dicker for her own program. If top comedians have their way, you will find fewer hour-long TV comedy shows next year. What they would like are half or three-quarter hour shows spotted every other week to allow better material and fresher approach. After viewing dozens of each type, we're inclined to go along with the comedians. The best on TV, for our money, are Red Skelton and Herb Shriner, each of whom has a half-hour, weekly show that is unpretentious yet hilarious. The hour-long revues are at the boring stage and they're thieves of talent.

PLATTER CHATTER

CAPITOL:—The ever lovely "Lord's Prayer" is given an effective rendition by Eddie Dean. "Beloved Enemy" backs it. Margaret Whiting and Jimmy Wakely join voices in "I Don't Want To Be Free" which easily could be another "Slipping Around" so far as best sellers go. It's got a lilting swing that's so popular right now. "Let's Live a Little" is on the tip. Ray Anthony's "Deep Night" is on the tip. "With All My Heart and Soul" is on the tip. "Cute of the new Christmas ditties is Mel Blanc's "I Told You I'd Be Back" backed by "Christmas Chopsicks." Continuing on Capitol, one of the finest of the new discs out this season combines two favorite Christmas songs done by the wonderful Waller Schumann Chorus. The songs are "White Christmas" and "Winter Wonderland" and this waxing is very highly recommended for sheer loveliness. The Four Knights revive "In the Chapel in the Moonlight."

"I REMEMBER"

BY THE OLD TIMERS

From Mrs. Violet Carr, Deer Creek, Ill.: I remember when the first bobbed hair came out in my home town I was the second girl in town to have her hair bobbed, and I was afraid to go home afterwards for fear of what my father would say. My oldest brother was furious and said I should stay home until it grew out. I remember when we had 100-lb bags of coffee in the attic and it was ground in the coffee grinder for each meal.

From C. H. Pepper, Vaughan, Miss.: I remember my first pocket handkerchief. It had a red border and cost a dime. My parents bought it from a peddler. He spread his pack of merchandise at our house as was the custom then. I was allowed to take the handkerchief to church, but was given strict instructions not to blow my nose on it. I am now three score and ten, have had many handkerchiefs since then, but none has ever compared to this one.

From Mrs. Agnes Wolf, Casper, Wyo.: I remember a farm in New York and the fall they used to thresh the grain before the threshing machine. I remember the candle molds and the oil lamps and how they smelled when the wick was not trimmed. We had fun, but I would not want to go back to those days and help keep the wood box full.

From John Elliott, Talmage, Calif.: I remember 1930, when I was 10, we lived in the Choctaw nation in the Indian territory on a little lone farm whose owner was Black Hawk, an Indian. At that time Belle Starr and her two children were living just a short distance from us.

CHRISTMAS SEAL LETTERS IN THE MAILS

Approximately 4,400 letters carrying tuberculosis Christmas Seals to people of Oxford County were mailed this week by the Maine Tuberculosis Association which started its 48th annual campaign to make possible its work of tuberculosis prevention and the development of improved public health services, Arthur F. Tiffin, Augusta, attorney, treasurer of the association announced.

"The Maine Tuberculosis Association," Tiffin said, "is an organization of private citizens interested in better health. It is not a government agency. Its only support is the contributions for Christmas seals which are made by people throughout the state."

"Last year, nearly 3,700 families in Oxford County contributed in this manner to the common good. They did so as free individuals, for nobody made them do it. Only in a democracy could Christmas Seals become a tradition and support a voluntary effort of this kind," he stated.

Tiffin pointed out that the work of a voluntary tuberculosis and health association is primarily one of research and study, organizing and demonstrating health services, from Velma A. Roukolainen of West Paris.

Norma L. Dodson from Elmer E. Dodson, both of Norway.

Ralph Spencer of Rumford from Kathleen Spencer of Hamilton, Ont.

Gertrude Eastman of Rumford from Victor H. Eastman of Mexico.

Wilho E. Komulainen from Cella K. Komulainen, both of Oxford.

assisting official health agencies and other groups to develop and carry out needed health services and maintain a program of education and information concerning health problems—particularly tuberculosis.

Tiffin also pointed out the success of the organized fight against tuberculosis by calling attention to the reduction in the death rate which has been achieved over a period of 45 years, more than 150 per cent. This reduction has been responsible for saving the lives of more than five million Americans, he said.

The association treasurer emphasized, however, that the declining death rate and number of lives saved are only a measure of the success of the program—not the relative importance of a disease.

"Living people who have tuberculosis and the effect of the disease upon them, their families, others and the economy of the state and nation, are the only true measure of the public health importance of a disease. According to these measures, tuberculosis is the major public health problem," he concluded.

Ninety-four per cent of Christmas Seal contributions made in Maine remain in the state to carry out local disease control programs. These include such activities as health education, case-finding, clinics, X-ray surveys, community organization, medical social service, rehabilitation and research.

Tiffin urged all persons to take part in this "program of working together for health—voluntarily—and for each other," by buying and using Christmas Seals.

Officials of the Tuberculosis Association stated that oftentimes Christmas Seals are delivered stuck together or in unusable condition due to adverse weather conditions occurring after mailing and during delivery. Any person receiving Seals in poor condition may obtain new ones from the local Seal Sale Chairman or the association head-
